Significant Research Findings

ICFRE-Forest Research Institute, Dehradun

- Survey was carried in FRI Campus, Dehradun for collections of gall infested plants of Ageratina adenophora and about 40 galls were collected. 20 galls were kept for rearing of Stem Gall fly Procecidochares utilis in cages one moth emerged in cage 01, one female braconid parasitoid emerged in cage 02 and one unidentified parasitoid emerged in cage 05. The damaged or emerged/unemerged 20 Galls were dissected under stereoscope microscope in which 10 species of hymenopteran parasitoids of different families viz., 05 of Leucospidae, 04 of Braconidae & 01 male of Eurytomidae were recovered and preserved in 70% Alcohol for further studies.
- In vitro antioxidant activity (AOXA) of ethyl acetate (EA) and n-butanol (BU) fractions isolated from 25% aqueous methanol (AM) fruit peel extract of Punica granatum was examined using DPPH free radical scavenging and ferric ion reducing power (FRAP) assays. In DPPH free radical scavenging assay, compared to the standard antioxidant ascorbic acid (IC₅₀ 0.67 µg/ml), EA (IC₅₀ 0.49 µg/ml) fraction was more potent in scavenging of DPPH free radicals while BU showed (IC₅₀ 0.62 µg/ml) comparable activity. In FRAP assay, compared to the standard antioxidant gallic acid, EA fraction (concentration 40 µg/ml) was more effective than the BU fraction. Evaluation of in vitro anti-inflammatory activity of EA and BU fractions using egg-albumin assay (protein denaturation assay) showed EA fraction (IC₅₀ 8.30 µg/ml) to be more effective than BU (IC₅₀ 11.11 µg/ml) compared to standard (diclofenac sodium, IC₅₀ 10.67 µg/ml).

ICFRE- Tropical Forest Research Institute, Jabalpur

- Standardized the nursery technique for production of seedlings of commercially important medicinal plant species Embelia tsjeriam-cottam (Baividang) and Desmodium gangeticum (Salparni) and established germplasm bank of Embelia tsjeriam-cottam (Baividang) at ICFRE-TFRI campus.
